'Test tracks' in Thoraipakkam

BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

What is worse than an essential need not being met? That need being met in a manner one did not bargain for. Here is an illustration from Thoraipakkam.

Resident Balu .N is integral to a group of eight residents from Balamurugan Garden in Thoraipakkam that is reportedly tasked with turning the wheels of officialdom. For the past few months, this task has been more assiduous than ever before. And they are plugging away at this task with greater spirit than ever before, for two reasons. One, they can enjoy the full benefits of three basic services, long-awaited and now in sight. And more importantly, they are doing the official wheel-turning more intensely to make sure a horrifying side effect resulting from processes to create infrastructure to deliver those services, is arrested.

The amenities in question are: drinking water supply and sewage drain network by CMWSSB; and Balamurugan Garden and Customs Colony are among areas in Thoraipakkam that battle bad roads due to multiple civic works happening simultaneously. The images were taken on August 16, 2025. PHOTOS: PRINCE FREDERICK

The other two projects being mired in challenges relating to the home stretch, the NOCs for them are nowhere in sight.

"We have learnt that on account of GCC's stormwater drain work, CMWSSB's sewage connections to some residences got damaged. Restoring them will take some doing," says Balu, adding that as for the stormwater drains themselves, the silt catch pits are yet to be constructed.

And so, bad road conditions are expected to continue.

And this worries not just residents, even occasional passers-by.

Anitha S, a resident of TVH Svasati located in a neighbourhood of Thoriapakkam that is untouched by this issue, was surprised at the state of these roads when she happened to pass through them en route to a destination elsewhere. And she brought the issue to The Hindu Downtown's attention.

A soiree to remember for MRC residents

Samavesha 2025, the cultural highlight of the MRC Fest, concluded last week, drawing an audience of over 700 enthusiastic MRC'ians to the MRC Kalyana Mandapam, Ramaswamy Hall.

Carrying the theme "Where Traditions Embrace Tomorrow", Samavesha showcased a vibrant blend of Indian classical elegance, folk traditions and contemporary creativity – creating a seamless bridge between the heritage of yesterday and the innovations of today, says a press release.

The evening began with the lighting of the kuthuvilakku by senior citizens, followed by a warm welcome from the MRC residents association president and an elegant entry of the office bearers. The programme included a choir performance in multiple languages that set the tone for unity in diversity; a classical jugalbandhi by Neeraja and Nandhini, merging rhythmic grace with musical brilliance; Mom and I - a heartwarming mother-daughter twinning hairstyle contest; a Spanish folk performance bringing global culture to the stage; and Ponniyin Selvan Fashion Round, beginning with a soulful song by Kundavai

The programme included a choir performance in multiple languages that set the tone for unity in diversity; and a classical jugalbandhi and Vanathi.

Staff nurses of Chennai Breast Centre, MRC danced to a contemporary Tamil fusion medley.

Among the highlights of the fest was a Ravi Varma-inspired sequence wherein his paintings were brought to life on stage by MRC residents.

The evening also honoured three distinguished guests: Major General Indra Balan, a Kargil War Veteran, Commodore J. Suresh, reputed Indian author and activist Sivasankari, and whose presence added immense prestige to the celebration.

Greater Chennai Corporation's Gender and Policy Lab, Kilikili, Disability Rights Alliance and other groups are fanning out to different localities to gather inputs that would drive design decisions pertaining to an exercise to make 10 public parks in Chennai friendly to children with disabilities

LIFFY THOMAS

"I used to be overweight, and so I could not use the slide as a child. Though older and past the age of using slides, I am interested in slides, the design of slides. I do not want children on the heavier side missing out on the slide," says Arvind Kumar, a student of Gurukulam, a centre for children with special needs in Anna Nagar.

The youngster with autism typed out an explanation approximating to this when asked why he sought "wide slides" in parks. Arvind was responding to a team that has fanned out to various neighbourhoods in Chennai to understand the need for inclusive parks.

To make Chennai's parks more accessible for persons with disabilities, Mayor Priya R. as part of 2025 budget announced making 10 important parks inclusive. Greater Chennai Corporation's Gender and Policy Lab, Kilikili, Disability Rights Alliance and other volunteering groups are facilitating consultations with different stakeholders to understand their needs.

On August 12, the team engaged with three institutions working in the inclusion space in Anna Nagar – MITHRA, Sankalp and Gurukulam – that brought their students to Bougainvillea Park which is among the green spaces that make up the ten. "A day earlier, we took six of our students to Bougainvillea Park so that they have an idea of the space. Five of them are on the spectrum and can only type their answers but they have valuable inputs to offer in terms of making public spaces welcoming of all," says Radha Nandakumar, founder-trustee, Gurukulam.

Three-pronged approach

The team is having a series of consultations, both in-person as well as online, across the city for the next few weeks to take in as many inputs as can be from all stakeholders including children with disabilities, their families and caregivers.

"We are looking at institutions in and around the parks, and making sure to include people across disabilities," says Kavitha Krishnamoorthy, founder and managing trustee of Kilikili.

Those who may not be able to articulate their thoughts are shown photographs of different types of play equipment that are provided in parks including the ones associated with inclusive parks. And then they are asked to choose.

For those who cannot make it to the consultations, a Google form is also being made available to gather feedback.

The 10 identified parks will soon have posters with QR code where any user including those from the community around can give inputs on inclusive features they would like to see incorporated.

Building a community

"Besides integrating the inputs collected from various parks, we see this as a community building exercise where people visit and monitor it regularly," says Kavitha.

Infinity Park at Santhome, which was opened in 2018, was one of the best examples of an inclusive park that is community-driven, but since the pandemic the place has slipped into neglect.

Pre-COVID, an active community, mostly of residents from the neighbourhood, oversaw the park.

"They were given some orientation before being enrolled as volunteers and it served as a good example of community ownership. They followed a roster between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. to help facilitate the park for special children. Their roles involved telling children not to use an equipment wrongly, alerting authorities of faulty equipment, and mediating for parents who hesitate in putting across a point to able-bodied children. Besides infrastructure, that is also needed to make a public space inclusive," says Kavitha.

While the team is working on collecting inputs for the 10 parks, they are also pushing to see Infinity Park restored.

The list

The 10 parks identified for the project: MMDA 1st Main Road Park (Zone I; Division 19); KKR Park in Madhavaram (Zone III; Division 28); Vasuki Nagar (Zone IV, Division 36); Anna Park (Zone V, Division 52); Murasolimarman Park in Perambur (Zone VI, Division 71); Bouganvillea Park (Zone VIII, Division 102); Natesan Park (Zone X, Division 133); Thiruvalluvar Nagar Park (Zone XII, Division 156); Jayachandran 1st Street Park (Zone XIV, Division 191); and Sri Sai Nagar park in Thorapakkam (Zone XV, Division 193)

How can one be part of this initiative? The form <https://forms.gle/CfFyU3yYWtkGZybNA> seeks to understand what children with disabilities, their families and caregivers and persons with disabilities would like to have in public play spaces and parks.

Maintenance of public parks is another key concern. At Infinity Park, for instance, a developer took care of the maintenance for the first two years.

"Maintenance is a big issue anywhere and we have to think of a new kind of arrangement and not just blame GCC. Can there be a maintenance fund for parks? What is the civic responsibility? Can the monitoring be done by a special school or RWA? These are among the questions we are grappling with," adds Kavitha.

Well and truly Brobdignagian

Around 20 pairs of hands are needed to form a human chain encircling this Baobab at Andhra Mahila Sabha; the tree is 250 years old

PRINCE FREDERICK

If one set their mind to understanding this Age in earnest, they would arrive at the following conclusion without wandering in a philosophical wilderness. It is an Age where epithets are taken in vain, being used mindlessly. What should be reserved for the sublime is misdirected into eulogising the quotidian. And when the sublime shows up, no apt epithet is to be found, all the suitable ones having been frittered away on everyday things. Recently, while in the presence of a tree at Andhra Mahila Sabha in Adyar, this writer was acutely made aware he had squandered away a valise of epithets denoting size in all the writing he had done before. Guilty of overworking “Brobdignagian” to a frazzle, he was tongue-tied when the truly Brobdignagian stared at him, a massive branch wedged in its cheek in amused derision.

It is a Baobab whose trunk takes multiple pairs of hands to be held in a comfortable embrace. T.D. Babu, associated with tree conservation organisation Nizhal, has had a ringside view of this tree being encircled in a human chain; and the exercise took nearly two dozen pairs of hands. This Baobab is Adansonia digitata or African Baobab.

He explains: “In 2023, as a Madras Day exercise, Nizhal together with the Forest Department organised a tree walk with multiple stops.

At Andhra Mahila Sabha, the participants did a succession of human chains fully encircling the tree, and every time, it took around 20 pairs of hands to do so.”

Baobabs are engineered by nature to be big hulking beings; but nurture determines the extent to which they follow that script. Babu notes the Baobab at Andhra Mahila Sabha has found a helpful environment and that has enabled it to reach its potential.

He points out the tree’s age would be anywhere between 250 to 300 years. It is still in the flush of youth: a Baobab’s life expectancy is

PHOTOS: PRINCE FREDERICK & SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT

1000 years. One need not be surprised to find Baobabs departing from planet earth prematurely. The lack of a conducive physical space can send them packing early. A Baobab at Egmore Museum left, whole centuries un-lived.

The Baobab at Andhra Mahila Sabha predates the organisation, and Babu remarks that the tree has been revered by the local populace through the centuries as sacred, a factor that would have aided it before it had the protection of a vast compound wall around it.

It is the fruiting season, and the tree was sporting a few fruits during the recent visit. The fruits, as well as the leaves, have uses for the dining table. Babu notes that even when the Baobab is reduced to its “bare bones”, it would wear quite a look. During summer, being a deciduous tree, it sheds all its leaves. At that time, it would look like it has been turned on its head, standing upside down – the branches would look like roots that have been suspended in air. Babu adds that during such times, the Baobab evokes the shape of a bandicoot. The shape of the trunk gives the impression of a horde of elephant legs being spliced together – one of the Tamil names for the Baobab tree is Annapuli.

This tree is among those in Chennai that Nizhal and the forest department want to be honoured with plaques that commentate upon their significance and announce their heritage status.

Applications invited for M-UTS Sahayaks at Central station

The Southern Railway, Chennai Division, has invited applications from candidates to serve as Mobile Unreserved Ticketing System (M-UTS) Sahayaks at Chennai Central railway station.

To improve passenger convenience and streamline the ticketing process, the Railway Board had announced the M-UTS Sahayak scheme.

Under this scheme, unreserved tickets will be facilitated by sahayaks round the clock at railway stations. The deployment of sahayaks at Central is aimed at reducing queue times and easing congestion at ticket counters.

The applications can be downloaded at https://sr.indianrailways.gov.in/sr/notice/1752908028980_Application%20for%20M-UTS%20Sahayaks.pdf, said a release from the railway.

Water stagnation in front of school

Water stagnation in front of Euro Kids School in Ottiyambakkam, located on Karanai Main Road, has become a recurrent problem for motorists.

During rains, stagnant water blocks access to the school, creating huge inconvenience for students, teachers and parents. Children are forced to wade through puddles of water to reach the gates. During peak school hours, the problem worsens, causing traffic jams and unnecessary delays for everyone travelling on this road.

The school management has already filed complaints with the government departments, requesting immediate drainage and repair work. However, the problem has not been resolved yet.

SHARON JESSICA MICHAEL

On the topic of Tamil theatre in Chennai, K. Thambi Parthasarathy is a voice to be reckoned with. He has been on its front line from the late 1960s, as performer and observer of trends. Seventy five years old, he has taken the foot off the pedal in recent years, but only slightly. The outings to the centre stage have dwindled. But he regularly faces the centre stage, being a presence in the audience at plays staged at the Sabhas of South Chennai, particularly those in Mylapore and Mandaveli, the latter his home turf.

Over the decades, Thambi has seen acting heavyweights up close, their histrionic skills being shaped and crystallised by the stage and exported to the silver screen and the tellie. A typical example is that of Raja Venkatraman becoming actor Srikanth. Thambi himself has had dalliances with these electronic mediums, but never let them supplant his love for the stage.

During much of his active theatre career, Thambi held a government job, being on the pay rolls of the Tamil Nadu Water Supply and Drainage Board (TWAD). The stage is easier on the practitioner in terms of time. Convenient late-evening hours can be scooped out of the week for rehearsals. The weekend can be arm-twisted without any resistance into accommodating performances. In case that gives the impression that Thambi viewed theatre as something to be pursued on the sidelines, take this. He took home the Best Actor award by the Mylapore Academy in 1991. Long-time Tamil theatre aficionados would remember his stand-out performance in Komal Swaminathan's Thanneer Thanneer; as also the one as Azhvarkadiyar in Ponniyin Selvan, directed for the stage by Prakash Kutty.

Not a surprise when you consider

A touch of drama to Madras

Mandaveli resident Thambi Parthasarathy has a sharp sense of the evolution of Tamil theatre in the city, having been part of nearly half a dozen troupes since the 1960s and also being a keen observer of trends in the field of drama in these parts that his passion for theatre was born early and home-brewed. Thambi's father S. Kannan (a chartered accountant who had been engaged in the freedom struggle) co-founded Entertainers Group with his friends, director Chellappa and Bala Subramaniam. A young Thambi started wearing greasepaint for the stage, encouraged by director Chellappa, who helmed seven of Entertainers Group's stage productions. Thambi would emulate his father in as much he would keep his day job and passion for theatre in tightly-sealed compartments, ensuring justice is done to both.

Rehearsals were almost always held at Thambi's Mandaveli home. For every play, the cast committed themselves to a minimum of 30 days' practice before facing the audience. The 1,500 sq.ft house had a thatched-roof first floor, a space that became their cocoon of creativity and growth.

Among memories not blurred by time is that of K. R. Vijaya's diligent commitment to rehearsals – yes, she was part of Entertainers Group before attaining celluloid fame. "She would come for rehearsals every single day," recalls Thambi. "Though practice would start at six in the evening, she would arrive much earlier for some social banter with my mother and grandmother."

Rehearsals were never hurried run-throughs. The director and writer would take meaningful pauses and fine-tune scenes, recreating the play right till the time the stage is just a nervous step away. Sessions ran from 6-6:30 p.m. to 9-9:30 p.m., getting extended as the premiere loomed large. Since all members had day jobs, evenings were their only window for practice.

The highlights

Plays by Entertainers Group include Aravanudhan Aasai; Kavilum Thaalamum; Love in Madurai; Top Secret; Dhideer Manaivi; Suya Dharisanam; and Karaiyai Thodatha Alaigal

Thambi Parthasarathy has acted in over 60 television serials. Notable serials include Kasalavu Nesam (directed by K. Balachander); Raghu Vamsam; Premi and Veetukku Veedu Looti.

Entertainers Group seemed to have consciously applied filters that narrowed down the focus to comedy. A signature production was Love in Madurai, written by K.K. Raman, a comedy-spinner par excellence with an expansive sphere of influence, one that touched stalwarts such as Crazy Mohan. Thambi takes a well-considered and balanced view of comedy. While acknowledging its place, he was clear about enforcing its limits. He points out: "Comedy should come along with the story," he says. "Nowadays the aim is only at comedy. People say they come here only for relaxation." He champions serious theatre, as borne out by his admiration for Fathima Babu's Un Kannil Neer Vazhindhal, which delivered a punch without punchlines.

When Parthasarathy later worked with other drama troupes, rehearsals shifted to new spaces. V. S. Raghavan's plays were practised at his Raja Annamalai home; the Prasanna troupe met at director Prasanna's Royapettah residence or at Venkateshwara School in Abhiramapuram; and Komal Swaminathan's plays were often kneaded together at a Kalyana mandapam in T. Nagar.

Having a theatre career spanning decades and nearly half-a-dozen troupes and a wide variety of plays (including R.S. Manohar's historical plays), one is bound to be at the coalface of changes overtaking the medium. He has seen the stage change in how it looked and sounded. He has heard plays move from live music to gramophone and then to pre-recorded tape and now to higher technology, where much is wired invisibly to the cloud. "We brought in pre-recorded songs during dramas," he says, recalling how he and his friend Suresh made that small tweak, one that helped change the backstage game.

In those days, production costs were modest, but so were the returns. "We never earned a profit," Parthasarathy admitted. "We even funded the plays ourselves. It was never about the money; it was about contributing to the art form."

Grocery kits distributed to 79 cancer patients

On the 79th Independence Day, Sankalp Beautiful World distributed grocery kits to cancer patients at the Cancer Institute in Adyar.

A total of 79 cancer patients benefitted from this initiative, with each kit designed to meet essential grocery needs for an entire month, said a press release. The event was graced by N.L. Rajah, chairman, Cancer Institute; Goutham Chander, founder and CEO, Sankalp Beautiful World; Sheela, Director, Sankalp Beautiful World; along with members and volunteers of the organisation.

Sankalp Beautiful World continues to work towards improving the quality of life for cancer patients through awareness programmes, patient support and fundraising efforts.

Iswarya Hospital launches breast health centre

Iswarya Hospital has launched a state-of-the-art breast centre, focusing on breast health screening and diagnosis.

The centre is equipped with advanced 3D Digital Mammography, along with Tomosynthesis, a next-generation imaging technology to deliver detailed breast scans and accurate detection of abnormalities.

The centre offers routine breast check-ups, diagnostic consultations, and evaluations based on family history, stated a release from the Hospital.

Playback singer Chinmayi Sripada inaugurated the centre. She said, "Early screening is vital. The stigma around breast health must end. More women should feel empowered, walk into the centre and take charge of their health without hesitation."

Dr. S. Rajasundaram, director of Oncology and chief executive officer of Iswarya Hospital, said,

"Breast cancer continues to be the most common cancer among Indian women, accounting for nearly 1 in 4 cancer cases. Unfortunately, more than 50 percent of these cases are detected in late stages due to a lack of awareness and delayed screening. Our goal is to shift the focus to early detection. Early detection of breast cancer dramatically increases survival rates. Women, those above 40, should undergo timely screening."

Junior tennis tourney at Nungambakkam stadium; entry free

The Tamil Nadu Tennis Association is hosting the UNIFI ITF Junior Tennis Cup tournament from August 18 to 24, 2025 at the SDAT Nungambakkam Tennis Stadium. Entry is free; open to all.

The ITF World Tennis Tour Juniors gives players aged 18 and under the opportunity to travel the world and develop their talent. TNTA has been hosting this ITF junior event for the past 20 years, and many players have benefitted from this event and gone on to represent India at the world stage. One such recent beneficiary of this tournament and the TNTA developmental system is Rethin Pranav, who won this tournament two years ago and recently reached as high as 31 in the world juniors—securing his place in the Australian Open, French Open, and Wimbledon junior event, says a press releases.

TNTA has partnered with Unifi Capital in Tamil Nadu, the press release adds. This is the 20th edition of an ITF Junior event and the third edition of the upgraded J60 event to be held in Chennai.

Apart from top Indian players, this tournament features players from countries such as the United States, Australia, Korea and Great Britain, says the release.

The events to be held are: boys singles U18; girls singles U18; boys doubles U18; and girls doubles U18.

The qualifying rounds will be held on August 16 and 17; and the main draw is from August 18 to 23.

The finals for doubles will be held on August 22; and for the singles on August 23.

The Fatimites' homecoming

Some came with flowers, some with walking sticks, and some simply with hearts overflowing. After decades apart – for some, as long as 40 years – the corridors of Fatima Matriculation Higher Secondary School, Kodambakkam, once again echoed with the laughter, tears and warm embraces of its past pupils. The first-ever large-scale alumni reunion, Voyage of Hope, held recently, was more than an event – it was a homecoming. Founded in 1958 beside Fatima Parish Church with just eight students, the school now educates over 2,500 annually and has produced achievers in every walk of life – from judges, doctors, bankers, engineers, and lawyers, to scientists, professors, lecturers and inspiring teachers. Its legacy also sparkles with gifted dancers, actors, dubbing artists and playback singers, says a press release.

Over 500 alumni, teachers and sisters from across the globe returned for the celebration. The day began with a Holy Mass, followed by a spirited March Past, where alumni from as early as the Class of 1971 walked alongside younger batches in coordinated colours. Mother Provincial officially declared the reunion open, marking a historic moment for the institution. Highlights included the launch of a special e-magazine, multiple whole-group photographs taken across different venues, and a nostalgic campus walk that unlocked a flood of memories. Even alumni with health challenges – some in wheelchairs or on oxygen support – made the journey back to their alma mater, says the press release.

Months of planning by the Past Pupil Association culminated in an evening of music, dance and a buffet lunch, leaving everyone with memories, laughter and more than a few happy tears to last a lifetime, the release adds.

Workshop on hospital administration on September 6 in Taramani

A workshop on hospital administration will be held on September 6 at TEACH Auditorium, The Spastics Society of Tamil Nadu, Taramani. Time: From 8 a.m. to 12 noon
