12. inverted duty structure (non) - it refers to a situation where the rate of tax on inputs purchased is more than the rate of tax on output or final products. An inverted duty structure arises when the taxes on output or final product is lower than the taxes on inputs, creating an inverse accumulation of input tax credit which in most cases has to be refunded. Inverted duty structure has implied a stream of revenue outflow for the government prompting the government to relook the duty structure.
13. manmade fibre (MMF) (noun) – Man-made fibres (MMF) are mainly of two types viz., synthetic and cellulosic. Synthetic fibres are produced from crude oil and cellulosic fibres are from wood pulp. The main varieties of synthetic staple fibres are polyester, acrylic and polypropylene. Cellulosic fibre is viscose fibre, modal, etc. Textiles made out of these synthetic and cellulosic fibres are called man-made fibre textiles. However, besides pure man-made fibre textiles, presently the man-made fibre and natural fibre mainly cotton blends are more popular.
